HANDLING GUIDE

Garden Cut's adherence to the cold chain ensures low shrink and optimal consumer quality.

At the Garden Cut Production Facility:

Proper temperature and handling control ensures product integrity and extends shelf life, resulting in increased sales and repeat purchases.

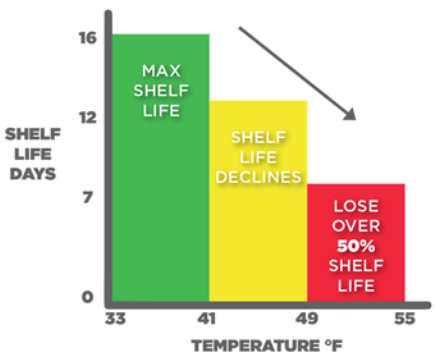
Temperature-controlled and monitored trailers transport your products, which are adjusted to appropriate temperature parameters. Temperatures of 34-40° F are used to ship, store, and display fresh-cut food.

Upon Delivery to your store:

- Check the temperature of the trailer and the product.
- Open many boxes and look for unsealed or cracked containers, as well as high temperatures.
- All fresh-cut produce should be refrigerated right away in the appropriate storage facility.
- Never allow fresh-cut produce to stay outside refrigeration.

Cooler / Backroom:

- The ideal humidity level is between 90 and 95%.
- Please do not spray or mist.
- Freshly cut produce should be kept in the cooler's coldest section.
- It's best not to put the produce immediately in front of the blowers, as this can cause it to freeze.
- Until ready to use, keep bags and boxes tightly closed.
- Avoid putting fresh-cut produce near ethylene-emitting items, which can hasten ripening and aging.



From our facility to yours, the cold chain is constantly monitored.

Sales Floor:

- Keep the products temperature 34-40° F.
- Fresh-cut items should be rotated according to the 'Best if used by' date.
- Display Fresh-cut items in many departments.
- Do not stack too high or too deep. Cold air must be circulated, and temperature checks should be performed on a regular basis.
- Never sell any fresh-cut produce that is of low quality or out of date for health and safety concerns.
