ASIAN PEARS

Asian pear skin can be golden yellow, green, or bronze and may be smooth, have some russeting, or covered in visible lenticels or pores. The flesh is ivory to white and is crunchy, juicy, and creamy with a central fibrous core encasing several small, brown-black seeds. When ripe, Asian pears are crisp with a sweet, floral flavor, low acidity, and a fragrant aroma.

ATTRIBUTES

Best suited for raw applications as their crunchy texture, and sweet flavor is showcased when consumed fresh, out-of-hand.

When carefully wrapped (has a tendency to bruise because of juice), it can last for several weeks or more in a cold, dry place.
